REFUSED BAILBOAD TRANSPORTATION.

George Peters, one of the Committee of Arrangements, tried to induce the Long Island Railroad officials to come to the assistance of the stranded excursionists. They would not take the people on board without a gnarantee from the Excursion Company. After much delay book to three hundred of the excursionists were brought back to Brookiya by rall, and reached the Bushwick avenue station at 8.30. The remainder of the party came back to Brookiya on the Crystal Stream, which also conveyed the dead bodies of the victims of the alsoster. They reached the dock at South Ther bodies were removed to the Fifth Precinct Police Station, and early this merning they were all taken charge of by friends or relatives, except that of the unknown girl, a number of people bave examined the broken timbers of the barge Republic, and the universal testimony is that they were rotten and unsafe.

Comptroller Myera's Vacation.

Comptroller Myers started this afternoon

Frank Brandel and George Peters, who examination of the planks and splinters that the wood was rotten clear through, and that a child's blow would have broken them. The condition of the two centre masts or stanchions which supported the hurricane-deck was round to be in the same condition as check was round to be in the same condition as that of the smaller wooden supports, and many of the excursionists broke of pieces of the timber and took them home with them to show to their friends.

Was rotten, and this is substantiated by an amount of the planks and splinters found floating in the harbor. Several hats, tans and umbrellas belonging to the excellent upon the water. The work of dragging the harbor for bodies will continue all day, although it is not believed here that any of the excursion-lists were drowned. THE WRECKED BARGE.

THE BARGE SAID TO BE UNSAFE.

They say it is not at all strange that the accident should have happened, when the barge was in so unsafe a condition, and claim that it had been in proper repair the disaster could not possibly have occurred.

At Kayser's store this morning it was stated that none of the employees of the establishment had been scriously injured, and not one had been lost.

Miss Emily Wagner, who was reported to have been killed, was at her desk in the cashier's box this morning, and the store was oponed for business as usual.

Mr. Peters said that he did not believe there was any truth in the report that several excursionists had fallen overboard and were drowned.

Two men and two women jumped into the water and were rescued by the disople on the dock and from a number of yachts and vessels which were anchored near by.

Deputy United States Supervising Steam-boat Inspector Starbuck stated this morning hat his department execused no jurisdiction over excursion barges. Their powers were insted to all vessels that used steam as a notive power.

51 the Custom-House there is a bureau for at the Custom-House there is a bureau for iterasing excursion barges. There it was exacted that no inspection of the barges was made because there was no law that provided for it. The licenses were simply given to the owners of excursion barges in order that these craft may ply about the rivers and harbor. It was not compulsory to have the barges licensed, and many of them had no flocuse. These licenses cost nothing. It was optional with the owners of excursion barges whether they were licensed or not.

It was also stated that the Myers excursion a. Mavigation Company, which owned the ward, and it is a mystery to me that not more ware killed or injured.

When it began to rain the curtains on the narboard side of the barge were lowered to keep out the storm. Naturally the people flocked over to the port side next to the dock to yet away from the damp curtains.

This made the barge list ta port and raised the root on the starboard side, allowing the wind to get under the roof and intit if be dily, together with its supports.

The curtains, which were down on the barge, offered the same resistance to the wind as a sail would, and increased the strain on the supporters to the roof.

When I got there the people had all left. The Crystal Stream made one trip over to Oyster Bay and took those who cared to go back on the regular train. On his return the catch the regular train at 10.10.

So far as I know, no special train was run from Oyster Bay, for it wasn't necessary and I do not believe the allegations of cruelty and brutaility on the part of the railroad employees.
